

The Home That Was Built by Laying Hens (Paperback)

By Uncle Cal Stoddard

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . This special re-print edition of Uncle Cal Stoddard's book The Home That Was Built By Hens offers insights into the raising of laying hens. Written in 1913, The Home That Was Built By Hens takes the form of a story related by Stoddard about a city dweller named Ned Campbell who loses his good paying job. With only a small savings left, Campbell is forced to look for a new livelihood. Dreaming of never depending on others to make his way, he heads to the country and goes into the chicken business. Through his own hard work, trial, error and self determination he makes a real success of it. Though a work of mostly fiction, the story is intentionally based upon sound principles of Poultry keeping and is intended to educate the beginning poultry keeper about what is required to make a success of breeding and managing laying hens in a manner that differed from typical poultry books. Following the entertaining story of Ned Campbell and his laying hens is an analysis explaining the critical portions of the story...
