Captain Alexandre Joao Marshall is furious. He's just been tricked by a silly female masquerading as a man, and has signed a binding contract to use his ship, the Scoundrel, in a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Brazil. It was his idea, his dream, and his money he'd brought to the table, and now the dream was doomed to fail. He'd sunk everything into this venture and it would've succeeded if he wasn't now legally shackled to a woman who didn't know her place. He'd be bankrupt and a laughingstock in the male-dominated Brazilian shipping industry if he couldn't persuade Edwina Webb to release him from the contract or continue her misguided charade. He should've expected fate would deal him a rotten hand. After all, his mixed race, Portuguese and Japanese, had already stacked the deck against him. He'd tried his best to defy the odds but after suffering unexpected racial prejudice from those he thought loved him, a bout of malaria that...
