Clocktower Books. Paperback. Condition: New. 432 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.1in.Zo Calla, 28, is bright, attractive, happy-go-lucky, and ambitiousbut struggling with a ton of radioactive karma. She wants to be the next hot-shot news reporter in the small California coastal town of San Tomas. As Zo would tell it, maybe her life is best summed up by the story of her modeling job. She was called to audition, and told she was beautifulbut alas, a foot too short and ten pounds too full. However, they would be delighted to call her to model her gorgeous eyes, hands, feet, teeth, even her golden curly hair. And then nobody ever called. She has been married, widowed, gone steady, almost fallen in love again, and never made it back to the altar. Its not even on her radar as she copes with life in the small city by the big sea, a shoal of vast and eternal space. Just how close the infinite void is becomes dangerously clear as everything starts going wrong--and a long-dead invasion fleet from deep space awakens to finish killing off life on Earth, making way for scary creatures with an alien agenda that asks no questions and takes no prisoners. Zo tries her best to take things in stride. Shes at the bottom of the ladder--typing obituaries at the town newspaper and hoping for a break. Her young son Max, 10, is in remission from bone cancer. Now the doctors have found a blip in his femur, and shes worried sick. Her mother is a capital pain, her library books are overdue, and her love life is about as shiny as the Coal Sack Nebula (not a star in sight). One day, researching a deceased persons bio in the morgue (newspaper library), she stumbles on a...
